Teaching

PhD courses: first-year PhD course in Microeconomics in Fall 2017 and 2018 and Real Analysis in the Fall 2015, 2016 and 2017. I have also taught a third-year optional course on Multi-Unit and Combinatorial Auctions in 2008 and 2009, at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. From 2019 to 2020, I taught Dynamic Economics and Mathematical Economics in IMPA. Also in IMPA, from 2003 to 2005, I taught Microeconomics, Mathematical Economics (General Equilibrium Theory), Dynamic Economics, and Introduction to Econometrics (Time Series).

Master (of Finance): International Economic Environment of the Firm in the Master in Finance of Tippie College of Business, since 2020 and Introduction to Finance in IMPA, in 2020.

Master of Business Administration (MBA): Most of my teachings is for MBA's courses. I teach Managerial Economics for online MBA, part time MBA, Executive MBA and full time MBA in Tippie College of Business, since 2014. Most of my teachings is for MBA's courses. I teach Managerial Economics for online MBA, part time MBA, Executive MBA and full time MBA in Tippie College of Business, since 2014. I have also taught to full time MBA students in Kellogg School of Management. In Fall 2008, I taught Microeconomics and from 2010-2013, I taught Competitive Strategy and Industrial Structure.

Undergraduate level: I taught Intermediate Micro at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign in the Spring 2008 and 2010. I also taught Calculus and Linear Algebra, for economics students of the Universidad Carlos III in Madrid from 2005 to 2007.

Courses for professionals: I taught Economics of Electricity Markets for executives of the Camara de Comercialização de Energia Elétrica (CCEE), in Brazil in November 2022. In October 2022, I taught a course about Economic Efficiency in Spectrum for executives at Anatel, the telecommunication agency in Brazil. From 2005 to 2006, I taught four editions of a course about Credit scoring models promoted by a consultancy company, FCE.

Professional Projects (specially in Energy Markets in Brazil and Colombia)

In April and May 2023, I taught a course on the Economics of Electricity Markets to the ONS (the Brazilian System Operator).

On November 7, 2022, I gave a talk about Economic Efficiency in the Energy Sector for people working in the CCEE (Câmara de Comercialização de Energia Elétrica), which is the market clearing institution in the energy sector in Brazil.

In October 2022, I was invited by PUC-RJ (Pontificia Universidade Católica do Rio de Janeiro) for giving a short course about Economic Efficiency in the Use of Radio Spectrum, for Anatel, the Brazilian Agency for Telecommunications.

During the academic semester March-June 2020, I was part of a team in IMPA that developed a Machine Learning project for Stone, a Brazilian fintech. I worked with other professors and students to improve the prediction of credit default.

In January 2019, I was hired as economic advisor to the president of Petrobras. I made suggestions for the design of the gas market in Brazil. In November and December 2018, I was part of the transition team to the new government of Brazil, elected in October.

In 2018, I concluded a R&D project with Getulio Vargas Foundation (FGV) about the business model of thermal units in Brazil (start: August 2016). I also work in another research project with FGV and Brazilian Electricity Wholesale Market (CCEE).

In 2017-2018, I worked as a consultant for the World Bank and the Colombian and Panama governments, to evaluate the economic viability of building an electricity transmission line between the two countries.

In 2016, I was invited by the Colombian regulatory agency for energy (CREG) as one of the members of a panel of three international experts, to evaluate changes in the rules of the electricity market in Colombia that CREG is considering to implement. Our task was to write a comprehensive report about the pros and cons of the proposed changes, and debate our views in a three days panel with the Colombian electricity industry, that happened in October 5-7, 2016 in Bogotá.

In October-November 2014, I wrote a paper report submitted to the Brazilian Electricity Regulatory Agency (Aneel), about proposed changes in the rules for the formation of the price of liquidation of differences in the Brazilian market. This research was supported by Tractebel, an electricity company subsidiary of Duke Energy in Brazil.

I was one of the keynote speakers of the Smart Grid Interoperability Panel (SGIP) 2014 Annual Conference, in Nashville, Tennessee on September 15-18, 2014.

In the second half of 2013, I prepared a report about the Colombian Electricity market for the Colombian Regulatory Commission for Energy and Gas (CREG), analyzing the impact of change from decentralized to centralized unit commitment in Colombia. I did this project with Alvaro Riascos (Universidad de los Andes) and Shmuel Oren (University of California at Berkeley). We found out that a resolution by CREG has increased the economic efficiency, but generators were able to capture most of the gains, due to an increase in market power. This report was later converted in an academic paper, which has been published in the Energy Journal.

Previously, I consulted for Getulio Vargas Foundation, in Brazil, in consulting projects to the Brazilian government, helping to design auctions for electricity contracts and airports. This includes some consultancy for the airport auctions and the first auction of electricity contracts in 2005.
